Town History

HUDSON

The town of Hudson is located in east-central Massachusetts. It is bordered on the southwest and west by Berlin, on the northwest by Bolton, on the northeast by Stow, on the east by Sudbury, and on the south by Marlboro. It is 18 miles from Worcester, 28 miles from Boston, and 196 from New York City. The State of Massachusetts is divided into counties and Hudson is part of the Middlesex County.

In 1886 the Town incorporated as Hudson, after Charles Hudson- a State Senator who donated $500 to the town towards the building of a new library.

Population: 18,710

Total area: 11.85 square miles

MAYNARD

Maynard, located on the Assabet River, was first settled in 1638 and was officially incorporated in 1871. Maynard was originally part of the towns of Stow and Sudbury. The community was named after Amory Maynard, a local mill owner. The community grew with the Assabet Woolen Mill and made the highest percentage of wool for U.S. Military uniforms. After the mill shut down in 1950, local businessmen bought the property and began leasing it as office space. Digital Equipment Corporation moved into the complex in 1957. The company eventually called Maynard its worldwide headquarters, giving Maynard the nickname "Mini Computer Capital of the World". "The Mill" as local call it, was renovated in the late 1990s as Clock Tower Place and houses many businesses, including the worldwide headquarters of Monster. The mill complex is also home to the oldest working hand wound clock in the country.
